

Quick! 10 Things to See in New York Before They Close

By: Sharon Hoge

Posted: 03/03/2014 6:22 pm EST

Updated: 03/03/2014 6:59 pm EST

Some of New York's must-see sites are permanent: Lady Liberty, the Empire State Building, Central Park, the Metropolitan Museum and other popular sites are always here. But exhibitions come and go. These are some shows that will close within weeks. Here today, gone tomorrow -- hurry to town!

6) Germaine Richier

A retrospective of bronze works by Germaine Richier, one of the first female sculptors to be acclaimed within her lifetime, is on display until April 12 at the stately converted bank that is the Dominique Lévy/Galerie Perrotin. From early torsos and figures, the pieces evolve between the two world wars to hybrids of humans crossed with bats, toads and vegetal organisms evoking notions of civilization regressing.