

28 Art Shows Worth Traveling For

Book your tickets to Paris, Belgrade, São Paulo, Lagos and London: Our critic's Grand Tour this fall offers Leonardo, Brancusi, Kara Walker and Marina Abramovic, among the global highlights.

By Jason Farago

Sept. 9, 2019

The artist Gego in 1969, assembling her “Reticulárea” at the Museo de Bellas Artes in Caracas. Credit Juan Santana/Fundación Gego

LATIN AMERICA Two Latin American museums turn to artists who make substantial sculpture out of the lightest materials. At the Museo Jumex in Mexico City, you'll find James Turrell's early projections, documentation of his nearly complete Roden Crater, and ethereal colored installations (Nov. 22-March 29). At the São Paulo Museum of Art is a retrospective of the modernist sculptor Gego (née Gertrud Goldschmidt), who fled Nazi Germany for Venezuela and used thin steel rods to make spindly, fragile, deeply poetic drawings in space (Dec. 13-March 1).